Energy Auditor Training and Building Performance Analyst Certification

Mountain View College will be offering training courses to prepare students to obtain certification from the Building Performance Institute, Inc. This program is specifically designed for professionals seeking to become accredited energy auditors. Our courses provide comprehensive and intensive studies of the building as a system to train auditors to recognize performance improvement opportunities. Our experienced instructors provide high quality classroom and field training focused on preparing students to successfully obtain building performance analyst certification. Subjects of study include: principles of energy, energy and the building shell, air leakage principles, whole house diagnostics, energy auditing, performance measurement, heating and cooling, and more...

Several cities have already passed unprecedented ordinances requiring energy audits to be completed on area homes prior to sell.
